

You must have a certificate for each required training course

Based on DoDD's posted requirements as of August 1, 2016

General Training Information:

You must keep your Red Cross CPR and First Aid training current at all times. First aid and CPR training must include an in-person demonstration of skills. These are separate from the required training listed on the proceeding pages. Those certificates are normally valid for 2 years.

When taking training online, you will need the ability to print the certificate that the training offers at the end of the course.

Billing (required for new providers) and Behavior Support Strategies (required for all providers) trainings are available online using DoDD's web site:

Options for additional training to meet DoDD's requirements can be found on <http://lcountydd.org/provider-training/>.

When choosing a company for your training, make sure that the training is DoDD approved and provides a certificate of completion with the name of the company, date of training, number of hours completed, topic(s) covered and the signature of the trainer. You must keep those certificates available for audits and for re-certification. Insert the certificates in this notebook.

DoDD may change the requirements of training during your certification. Please check the courses required to ensure that you are fulfilling their requirements:
