- The service coordinator on-call will inform the person(s) service coordinator about the incident and the protective measures put in place the next working day.

NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS

In addition to the previously outlined responsibilities and actions, the provider has additional notification responsibilities and time lines to meet when a suspected/alleged major unusual incident occurs while the provider is responsible for the person.

- On the same day that the discovery of the potential major unusual incident occurs the provider must notify the person(s)' service coordinator; guardian, or other person identified; staff or family living at the person's home who are responsible for care; and other providers as necessary to ensure continuity of care and support for the individual.
 - These notifications or efforts at notification will be documented, preferably on the unusual incident report form;
 - The person(s) service coordinator will be responsible for ensuring that these notifications are made.
- Notifications are not required when:
 - The person to be notified is the primary person involved in the alleged/suspected major unusual incident, or the spouse or significant other of the primary person involved;
 - Someone dies and those identified above are already aware of the death; and
 - When notification might jeopardize the health and welfare of the person involved.
